Glossary

	Meaning	Why it's important
GI	Glycemic index. GI ranks carbohydrates on a scale from 0-100 according to their effect on blood sugar levels. The lower the GI, the slower the rise in blood sugar levels after eating.	Low GI foods release energy slowly, keeping you fuller for longer. GI is an important dietary consideration with low GI diets showing benefits for weight control.
Gluten free	Gluten is a protein found in wheat, rye, barley and oats which some people have sensitivity to. Gluten free foods contain no detectable trace of gluten.	Gluten free foods are important for people with gluten intolerance or coeliac disease and those with sensitivity to gluten.
Colours	A colour additive is any dye, pigment or substance which when added to a food, is capable of imparting colour. Food colours are classified as either - natural colours, made from pigments extracted from naturally occurring matter or - artificial colours which are synthetically prepared.	Colours are listed on the label, along with other ingredients. Some people are sensitive to particular added colours. Many businesses strive to remove artificial colours in line with consumer demand.
Allergen	Food allergens are typically naturally-occurring proteins in foods or derivatives of them that cause abnormal immune responses. The key food allergens are: peanuts, tree nuts, soy, milk, egg, cereals (containing gluten), seafood, fish and sesame.	Prevalence of food allergies around the world is believed to be increasing. Products that contain any of the 9 key allergens or derivatives of them must be listed as part of the ingredient list.
B group vitamins	B vitamins are a group of water soluble vitamins. There are eight B vitamins Thiamin, Riboflavin, Niacin, Pantothenic acid, Biotin, Vitamin B6, Folate and Vitamin B12.	B vitamins are essential for energy production and normal growth and development.
Folate	Folate is a water-soluble B vitamin that occurs naturally in food. Good sources of folate include asparagus, sweetcorn, brussel sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, chickpeas, wheat germ, rolled oats and kidney beans.	Folate plays a vital role in making DNA, in growth and development and in the production of new cells. Both adults and children need folate to make normal red blood cells.
Omega 3 DHA	Omega 3 docosahexaenoic acid (DHA) is a long-chain polyunsaturated fatty acid. Omega 3 DHA is found primarily in oily fish and in smaller amounts in other seafood, eggs and meat.	Omega 3 DHA is widely recognised for its health benefits and research highlights its role in brain development, optimal visual acuity and heart health. Products with Omega 3 are not suitable for vegetarians or vegans.
Fibre	Dietary fibre is found in cereals, fruits and vegetables. It is made up of the indigestible parts of plants, which pass relatively unchanged through our small intestine, with complete or partial fermentation in the large intestine.	The main role of fibre in the diet is to keep the digestive system healthy. It also helps with keeping you feeling fuller for longer.
Preservatives	Substance used to slow the natural decay of food products.	To increase the freshness qualities and longevity of the bread.
Vitamin E	Vitamin E is a fat soluble vitamin that acts as an antioxidant in the body. Good sources of vitamin E include wheat germ oil, sunflower seeds, almonds, olive oil, spinach and broccoli.	Vitamin E contributes to cell protection from free radical damage and contributes to normal growth and development.
Iron	Iron is an essential mineral made up of a number of proteins that maintain good health. Wholegrain cereals, meats, fish and poultry are the major contributors to iron intake in Australia.	Haemoglobin, one of the proteins, is important for the transport of oxygen to tissues throughout the body. Iron is also important for normal immune system function and contributes to normal growth and development.
Zinc	Zinc is an important mineral that the body uses for a variety of processes. It is required for the catalytic activity of about 100 enzymes, plays a role in immune function, protein synthesis, wound healing, DNA synthesis, and cell division.	Zinc supports normal growth and development during pregnancy, childhood and adolescence and is required for normal cell division. It is also necessary for normal immune system function and contributes to normal skin structure and wound healing.
Par-bake	Bread that is partly baked when sold and must be baked off prior to serving.	Sold frozen, par-baked bread can be baked off as required reducing wastage and gives the taste & aroma of fresh baked bread without the time and resources required for baking from scratch.
HACCAP	Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point. An internationally recognised tool used to identify and manage food safety hazards and minimise their risks.	Ensures businesses maintain the highest possible food safety standards. All Tip Top baking sites are HACCAP accredited.
